

Abstract of the Disclosure

Methods and systems for sharing data can maintain effective levels of security and privacy. A sharer, intending to make a 5 selection of data available for sharing, generates a token that represents the selection of data. The sharer can provide the token to intended recipients. Recipients, upon receipt of a token, may redeem the token for the selection of data and may share the token with others who also require shared access to the selection of data.